

“Terry’s presentation was inspiring and uplifting, resulting in a standing ovation by all in attendance. He walks the walk and talks the talk.

It’s not the good days that make or break your people. The Down Day Decides.

“The decision to succeed does not happen once.

It happens every single day. In fact, several times a day, by the actions you take and do not take.”

Arm your people for the down day.

Every dip is a decision.

SOUND FAMILIAR?

- Your top people hit the number. The middle of the board could, and doesn't. They know what to do. The gap is the call they don't make after a "no."
- The kickoff high is gone by the first bad week. A deal dies on Tuesday, and by Friday it's business as usual.
- You recruit them, train them, and lose them in their first slump. Every new hire hits a stretch where nothing closes. What they decide in that stretch is whether they stay.
- "The market's slow" spreads faster than any best practice.
- Your managers can see who's sinking. They need something better to say on Monday than "hang in there."

Terry L. Fossum has lived it. His income dropped by three-fourths overnight, and what he decided that night took him to the top fraction of 1% of a global industry. Your people will laugh, some of them will cry, and every one of them leaves with three questions for the day it goes wrong and a signed card: "If it's a down day, then I will ____."

A MOMENT THEY WON'T SEE COMING Footage filmed aboard the International Space Station.

Life insurance agents who explained setbacks optimistically sold 37% more in their first two years. New hires who scored that way stayed at twice the rate.
